

Whatever claim Thou advancest, one might say Thou art much better.

Thou art the Companion of the soul, the Sign of the Beloved,
From Thee tranquility of spirit cometh, from Thee distress.
If a ray from Thy Face shineth on the Divine realms, [10]
Thou wilt see a hundred Cananaean Josephs put up for sale.
From Thee Joseph's fragrance bloweth; from Thee the Messianic Spirit;
Thou art the white-handed Moses, Thou, the flame on Mount Paran.

Bound are the heads by Thy locks, pierced the hearts
By Thine anguish, be they of insane laymen or of Divine sages.

I'm drunk of Thee, 'cause of Thee I'm notorious, whether Thou offerest me a hundred lives, or Thou slayest me.
If Thou art the Angel of death, how come that Thou revivest me?

If Thou art the Reviver of bodies, how is it that Thou actest as a snake?

If Thou graciously movest in the court of a king, Thou changest [15]

The king into a servant and the servant into a king.
A spark of Thy Face fell upon the rose-bush of the soul,
And lit its beauty as a crimson tulip.

O! What a breeze wafted announcing to the soul the glad tidings

A Hymn to Love 225

That from the East of the Spirit that Divine Face hath appeared.

Souls soared with yearning, hearts were enraptured in ecstasy, Love fell in love with Him, and so did the essence of creation.

Through His wisdom, the coincidence of opposites is made manifest,

Now Love becometh a servant, now the Intellect a porter.

Stop tearing asunder the veil of mystery, O Dervish:

A cry riseth from the city of men and the world of brutes. [20]

A hymn to love: a poem revealed by Bahá'u'lláh

Sáqí, bi-dih ábí is a 20 one rhymed (-ání) distiches poem. It is one among eight Persian poems, composed by Bahá'u'lláh, signed "Dervish," and published by the Iranian Bahá'í scholar
'Abdu'l-Óamíd Ishráq Khávarí (1902–1972) in his multi-volume anthology of the Writings of the Central Figures of the Bahá'í Faith Má'idiy-i-Asmání (4:176-211). The eight Persian poems quoted by Ishráq Khávarí are as follows: 1

1. Báz áv-u bi-dih jámí, that may be paraphrased as “Come back and proffer a chalice” (qtd. in Ishráq Khávarí 186-7; see also Majmú’iy-i-Áthár 30:158-59);
2. Sáqí az Ghayb-i-Baqá, that may be paraphrased as “The Cup-bearer of the hidden Realm” (qtd. in Ishráq Khávarí 209-11; see also Majmú’iy-i-Áthár 30:157-58);
3. ‘Ishq az Sidriy-i-A‘lá ámad, that may be paraphrased as “Love came from the loftiest Tree” (qtd. in Ishráq Khávarí 179-80; see also Majmú’iy-i-Áthár 30:172-74);
4. Bi-Jánán ján hamí dar-yáft rah, that may be paraphrased as “The soul hath found its way to the Beloved” (qtd. in Ishráq Khávarí 176-8; see also Majmú’iy-i-Áthár 30:167-69);
5. Sáqí, bi-dih ábí zán shu‘liy-i-rú‘ání, that may be paraphrased as “O Cup-bearer, give me a drop of the mystic flame” (qtd. In Ishráq Khávarí 192-4; see also Majmú’iy-i-Áthár 30:171-72);
6. Mast-and bulbulán, that may be paraphrased as “Nightingales get inebriated” (qtd. in Ishráq Khávarí 194-6; see also Majmú’iy-i-Áthár 30:169-71);
7. Sa‘ar ámad bi bistar-am yár, that may be paraphrased as “At dawn the Friend came to my bed” (qtd. in Ishráq Khávarí 181-84; see also Majmú’iy-i-Áthár 30:163-65);
8. But-i-má ámad bá ba‘í-u bádih, that may be paraphrased as “Our Charmer came with a glass and wine” (qtd. in Ishráq Khávarí 188-92; see also Majmú’iy-i-Áthár 30:159-63).

These eight poems are also quoted in Majmú’iy-i-Áthár 30:157-74. Excerpts from a few of them are included, together with excerpts from other poems by Bahá’u’lláh, by the Iranian Bahá’í scholar Mírzá Asadu’lláh Fá‘íl Mázandarání (ca.1880–1957), in volume 4 of his Tárikh ,uhúru’l-Óaqq (History of the Manifestation of Truth), a nine volume history of the Bábí and Bahá’í religions (141-2). Two of them are mentioned in the Bahá’í World volumes among “Bahá’u’lláh Best Known Works.” They are Báz Áv-u Bi-Dih Jámi and Sáqí az Ghayb-i-Baqá. Franklin D. Lewis, an expert in Persian Language and Literature, has offered three different translations of Sáqí az Ghayb-i-Baqá (“Short Poem” 86-9). Three of these poems are mentioned, and a few verses translated, by Stephen N. Lambden, an English Bahá’í scholar focusing on Shi‘i Islam and Qajar Persia, early Shaykhism, the Writings of the Báb, the Writings of Bahá’u’lláh, in his “Sinaitic Mysteries” (116-7): Bí jánán ján hamí

Historical hints

These eight poems were most probably written in Kurdistan, where Bahá'u'lláh remained from 10 April 1854 to 19 March 1856 and, in 'Abdu'l-Bahá's words, "lived in poverty," wearing the "garments . . . of the poor and needy" and eating the "food . . . of the indigent and lowly . . ." (qtd. in GPB 124, sec.7, para.42). Lewis writes about them:

The information in God Passes By seems to suggest that these poems signed "Dervish" date to the earlier phase of Bahá'u'lláh's residence at Sar-Galú, probably some time between the Spring of 1854 and the Winter of 1854–55. However, we cannot yet completely rule out the possibility that they were composed later, while at the Khálidí lodge in Sulaymáníyyih, or perhaps even in the period shortly after his return to Baghdad. ("Short Poem" 84)

The attribution of their drafting to the years of Bahá'u'lláh's stay in Kurdistan (1854–1856), during which He was in touch with the local Sufi communities, is also upheld by Mázandarání in his Tárikh-i-uhúru'l-Óaqq (4:139). Moreover, this attribution seems confirmed by their takhalluṣ, "Dervish," the nom de plume introduced into the final verse of these eight poems according to the use of Persian lyrics. In that period Bahá'u'lláh had adopted the surname of Dervish Mu'ammad (see Lewis, "Short Poem" 84). In this paper, we will comment only upon the poem which begins Sáqí, bi-dih ábí.

Literary aspects

As to its form, this specific composition may be defined a poem in the light of the following definition of poetry, given by Lewis as to Nineteenth century Persia: "rhymed speech (moqafâ) composed in lines (bayt / abyât) following one of the established quantitative meters (bahr / bohur) and arranged according to a particular form" ("Poetry as Revelation" 102). Specifically, Sáqí, bi-dih ábí seems a ghazal.

As to the ghazal, the French Orientalist Régis Blachère (1900–1973), a profound interpreter of the Koran, which he translated into French (1947), writes in the Encyclopaedia of Islam that ghazal means "'song, elegy of love,' often also 'the erotico-elegiac genre.' The term is Arabic, but passed into Persian, Turkish and Urdu and acquired a special sense in these languages."

The term ghazal comes from the Arabic root ghazala:

He talked, and acted in an amatory and enticing manner, with a woman, or with women; he practised . . . the talk, and actions, and circumstances, occurring between the lover and the object of love. (Lane 6:39)

And thus the Lane Arabic-English Lexicon defines the word ghazal as

The talks, and actions, and circumstances, occurring between the lover and the object of love . . . an inclining to foolish and youthful conduct, or a manifesting of passionate love, and becoming notorious for affections to women . . . talk, and amatory and enticing conduct, with women; or play, sport, dalliance, or wanton conduct, and amorous talk, with women . . . play, sport, or diversion, with women . . . or the talk of young men and [or with] young women: . . . praise of what are apparent of the members of the object of love: or the mention of the days of union and of disunion: or the like thereof. (Lane 6:39)

Blachère explains:

the ghazal was . . . a man's song addressed to a girl; contamination by the noun ghazál "gazelle," from the images and comparisons associated with it, is not perhaps to be excluded (cf. "to make sheep's eyes").

A Hymn to Love

229

Whatever the reason, the idea evoked by the term ghazal, like the English "gallantry" and particularly the noun "gallant," now fallen into disuse, became elaborated in a realm of ideas where there mingle the notions of flirtation, compliments made to a lady, complaints at her coldness or inaccessibility and the description of effeminate languishing attitudes on the part of the lover . . .

As to Persian ghazals, Alessandro Bausani (1921–1988), a well-known Italian Islamicist and a deep knower of Persian religiosity, says that

A widely accepted opinion is that the ghazal, an unknown genre in the ancient Arabic poetry, derived from an extrapolation and an autonomous use of the tashbíḅ [first part] of the qaṣíde. However it also may be that, without excluding the former hypothesis, the ghazal may have derived from some form of oral, popular autochthonous poetry. ("Letteratura neopersiana" 176)

Bausani also writes that the ghazal is “the primary instrument of Persian lyrics” (ibid.). He explains that qaṣídihs and ghazals are technically different from one another only for their different “length and different subjects” (ibid.). The former was mainly used in Persia as “an instrument of panegyric or philosophic and moralizing poetry” (ibid.). The latter dealt with “wine, love, springtime and mystics” (ibid. 176). Edward G. Browne (1862–1926), the renowned British Orientalist, also explains: “The ghazal differs from the qaṣída mainly in subject and length. The former is generally erotic or mystical, and seldom exceeds ten or a dozen bayts; the latter may be a panegyric, or a satire, or it may be didactic, philosophical, religious” (27). While speaking about Persian ghazals of the 10th–13th centuries, Bausani also explains that in those centuries the ghazal has “as its object the ma‘shú k ‘the Beloved,’ whereas the kaṣída has as its object the mamdú?, ‘the Praised’

230
Lights of Irfán vol. 16

(Prince or patron).” However, he adds, in the period from the 13th to the 16th century “the chief object of the ghazal, the ma‘shú k, the (earthly) Beloved, becomes inextricably connected not only with the ma‘búd [literally, the Adored One], the divine Beloved (God, or better His representative on earth, the mystical Initiator) but even with the mamdú? [literally, the Celebrated One], the traditional object of the kaṣída” (“Ghazal. ii. In Persian literature”).

The features of the Persian ghazals, as explained by Bausani in the Encyclopaedia of Islam,⁶ may be summarized as follows:

1. Length: “it consists of a few bayts (verses, or distiches), generally not less than five and no more than twelve” (Bausani). Other authors consider up to 15 verses as acceptable for a ghazal (Rossi, Grammatica 92). This is true for Khájjih Shamsu’d-Dín Mu?ammad Óáfi.z-i-Shírází (ca.1318–1390), for example, whose Díván comprises only two ghazals longer than 15 verses. But Mawláná Jalál ad-Dín Rúmí (1207–1273), one of the greatest Persian poets, wrote some ghazals that have more than 15 verses, up to 29 couplets. However, all scholars agree that a ghazal should be short. It has been defined as “an older Iranian cousin to European sonnets and short odes” (Hilmann, “Hâfez and the Persian ghazal” G).

2. Rhyme: “It has a single rhyme (often accompanied by a radíf); in the first bayt, called maṭla‘, both hemistichs too rhyme together” (Bausani).

3. Nom de plume: “the last bayt, called ma kṭa‘, contains the nom-de-plume (takhalluṣ) of the author” (Bausani).

4. Contents: “the contents of the ghazal are descriptions of the emotions of the poet in front of love, spring, wine, God, etc., often inextricably connected” (Bausani).

5. “In classical ghazal each verse forms a closed unit, only slightly interconnected with the others. To explain this feature of the ghazal, some modern scholars have invoked the ‘psychology of depth’ to show that in the ghazal there is unity, A Hymn to Love 231 but an unconscious one. However this may be, external incongruity would seem to be a real rule in classic Persian poetry. We are in the presence of a bunch of motifs only lightly tied together” (Bausani). This rule admits exceptions: “If two or more verses belong in sense to each other, they are called mukaṭṭa” (Wilberforce-Clarke xiv).

Finally Wilberforce-Clark remarks about ghazal:

The poem must be finished, without defects in rhyme, and pure in language, all obsolete words, or vulgar expressions being avoided. Each verse must convey a complete thought. The verses are strung like pearls on a thread, which makes them a necklace, the value whereof lies in the value of each pearl, not in the thread. (ibid.)

As to the features of the ghazal in the times immediately before Bahá’u’lláh, Bausani writes:

The fourth period [of Persian ghazal], that of the so-called Indian style (10th/16th to 12th/18th centuries) . . . sees an intellectual reflection on the accepted symbols of the classical ghazal, which becomes an arena for a quasi-philosophical exercise of the mind. The ghazal finds a renewed congruity of meaning, and its protagonist, instead of the ma‘shú k/mamdú?/ma‘búd [that is, the Beloved, the Adored One, the Celebrated One] seems to be the Mind of its Author, creating ever new purely intellectual combinations of the old worn-out symbols. (Bausani)

Sáqí bi-dih ábí seems to meet all these requirements, the most important exception being its length: 20 verses. However, as has been said above, both Óáfiz. and Rúmí wrote some ghazals with more than 20 verses. The main reason why this poem can be seen as a ghazal is that its central theme is Love. In fact, it may be considered as a hymn to Love, its protagonist. Like the other seven poems which have been mentioned at the beginning 232 Lights of Irfán vol. 16 of this paper, Sáqí bi-dih ábí seemingly alludes to Bahá’u’lláh’s mystic encounter with the Most Great Spirit in the Síyáh-Chál, the subterranean dungeon in Teheran where He was confined from middle August to December 1852, also mentioned in several biographical passages of His Writings. In this poem the Most Great Spirit is described first as Water and Fire, and then as Love itself. Many verses are devoted to a description of Love and of its impact on human hearts and on the world.

A slow reading of the poem

The following thoughts are offered only as personal reflections on the verses revealed by Bahá'u'lláh, whose perusal may evoke remembrances of His own Writings as well as of verses of earlier poets.

Huva'l-'Azíz

He is the Glorious

The invocation of one of the names of God, usually the name Allah, at the beginning of a script is very frequent in the Islamic world. The invocation Huv' Alláh means He is God. Francis Joseph Steingass (1825–1903), the German linguist expert on Arabic, Persian and Sanskrit who authored a well-known Persian–English dictionary, writes about Huva, in Arabic huwa, and in Persian also hú:

He; he is; a name of God;—also hú'i náma, The name of God, generally accompanied by one or more of his attributes, written in front of a letter or book as an auspicious omen . . . (Steingass 1516)

As to Alláh, Steingass writes: “God: The God, by way of eminence (being compounded of the article al, The, and iláh, a God)” (Steingass 95). The invocation appears at the beginning of a few of Bahá'u'lláh's Writings, both in poetry, as for example in Báz áv-u bi-dih jámí, and 'Ishq az Sidriy-i-A'lá ámad, and in prose. The Tablets translated into English which begin with this invocation comprise Ishráqát, Law?-i-Maqßúd, a Tablet quoted by Bahá'u'lláh in Súriy-i-Haykal: Law?-i-Náßiri'd-Dín Sháh (108-11, paras.210-4), a Tablet quoted in Fire and Light (16, no. VII), the Tablet to Badí' (qtd. in Balyuzi, King of Glory 299), a prayer (qtd. in BP43-5) and section 106 of “Questions and Answers” (139-40).
A Hymn to Love 233

About the invocation “He is God,” ‘Abdu'l-Bahá wrote:

Thou hast asked regarding the phrase, “He is God!” written above the Tablets. By this word it is intended that no one hath any access to the Invisible Essence. The way is barred and the road is impassable. In this world all men must turn their faces toward “Him-whom God-shall-Manifest.” He is the “Dawning-place of Divinity” and the “Manifestation of Deity.” He is the “Ultimate Goal,” the “Adored One” of all and the “Worshipped One” of all. Otherwise, whatever flashes through the mind is not that Essence of essences and the Reality of realities; nay, rather it is pure imagination woven by man and is surrounded, not the surrounding.

Consequently, it returns finally to the realm of supposition and conjectures. (TAB3:485)

Taherzadeh wrote in this regard, that whenever Bahá’u’lláh quotes the Koranic verse: “There is none other God but God” at the beginning of a Tablet, He:

proclaims in majestic and powerful language that in this day He has removed the letter of negation which had been placed before that of affirmation. This phrase, which the Prophet of Islam regarded as the cornerstone of His Faith, is now in the Dispensation of Bahá’u’lláh symbolically replaced by the affirmative phrase “He is God.” This signifies that the Author of this Faith holds within His own hands the reins of authority, and, unlike the Dispensations of the past, no one will have the power to wrest it from Him. Hence the assurance in His Writings that this is “the Day which shall not be followed by night.” (160)

234

Lights of Irfán vol. 16

In this poem Bahá’u’lláh mentions God’s attribute al-‘Azíz, “Excellent; precious, dear, valuable, rare, choice; magnificent, glorious, powerful; venerable, pious, holy; a king, ruler, prime minister (especially in Egypt)” (Steingass 848). This adjective has been translated “the Glorious.” It is the ninth among the ninety-nine beautiful Names of God that Moslem theologians have found in the Koran. In the Bahá’í Writings it has been translated the “Mightiest” (Bahá’u’lláh, qtd. in BP92, Long Healing Prayer; Nafahat-i Fa’l 2:17, Law’-i-Anta’l-Káfí).

Sáqí, bi-dih ábí zán shu’liy-i-rú’ání,
Tá kih bi-shúyad ján-rá az vasvasiy-i-nafsání,

O Cup-bearer, give me a drop of the mystic Flame,
That it may wash my soul from the whispers of the flesh,

Bahá’u’lláh here addresses His Beloved, perhaps the Most Great Spirit, Whom He had seen as a Maid, calling Him Cup-bearer. This familiar personage of Persian mystic poetry has his origin in the Koran and in the Traditions. Bausani explains that Sufis relate the cup-bearer to “the ancient mystic legend wherefore at the beginning of the Divine Love, the cup-bearer (sáqí), as God-the Beloved, poured the wine for God-the Lover during forty successive dawns and thus he created the world” (“Letteratura neopersiana” 162; see Religion in Iran 277). According to the German Orientalist Annemarie Schimmel (1922–2003), Sufis saw this moment in poetical imagery as a spiritual banquet in which the wine of Love was distributed to humanity so that everyone received the share which he or she will have in this life. Here, the imagery of wine is used not for the final goal of the mystic’s unification with God and his being filled with Him, but rather as the starting point of the flow of Divine grace at the beginning of time. (Deciphering 109)

A Hymn to Love 235

It is the rúz-i-alast, the metahistorical morning when human souls entered into the eternal Covenant with their Creator, which is the basis of their life on earth and of the development of human civilization (see HW, Persian, no.19). Carlo Saccone, an expert in and a translator of Persian poetry into Italian, comprising the whole Díván by Óáfí.z, writes in this regard that the wine which he [the cup-bearer], incessantly invoked and implored, pours into the cup of the lover\poet clearly reveals its sacred imprinting, i.e., it is a transposition of the “mysterious” wine which the youthful cup-bearers of Muslim paradise offer to the blessed spirits. (44)

According to Saccone, the cup-bearer sometimes symbolizes the beloved himself, as an initiator, i.e., he who . . . initiates the poet . . . into the mysteries of wine and love for him [God]. [And the poet’s] initiation . . . is essentially a summon to folly, to disarm one’s intellect and its analytic processes, because the lover will attain unto the reunion with his friend . . . only in the condition of “sacred folly,” fostered by his drunkenness. (ibid. 49, 50)

A poem by Rúmí also begins with an invocation to the sáqí and a request of wine:

Happy-cheeked sáqí of mine, give the cup (jám) like the pomegranate blossom (gulnár); if for my sake you will not give for the sake of the heart of the Beloved (Yár). (Mystical Poems 2:70, no.290, v.1; Díván, “Ghazalyát,” no.2283)

236

Lights of Irfán vol. 16

In Sáqí, bi-dih ábí, the lover asks the Cup-Bearer to give him a drop of the Mystic flame, combining three images: water, ábí, here translated “drop,” wine (the Cup-Bearer), and fire, shu‘lih, “Light, splendour, lustre, shining, flashing, coruscation; blaze, flash, fire, flame” (Steingass 747). These three images are often associated in Persian mystical poetry. Bausani writes that in Persian literature “the wine is also fire, and in this it is similar to the alchemists’ water, which is also fire . . . In fact in traditional lyric poetry the Wine is often called ‘water’ and compared to the ‘Water of Life’ (âb-i haivân)” (Religion in Iran 272).

In the second hemistich the lover explains why he wants a drop of the mystical flame: he wants to cleanse his soul from the whispers of the flesh. Bahá’u’lláh uses two images: the whispers and the flesh. As to the Koranic image of the whispers, vasvasih, “Inspiring, suggesting (one’s own mind or Satan); a suggestion; instinct; fear, anxiety; conscience; temptation” (Steingass 1468), translated by Shoghi Effendi as “whisper” (Law?-i-Dhabíh 246, para.13; Muntakhabátí 157), the image of “the whispers of the flesh (vasvasiy-i-nafsání)” comes from the Koran:

In the Name of God, the Compassionate, the Merciful.

Say: I betake me for refuge to the Lord of Men, The King of men, The God of men, Against the mischief of the stealthily withdrawing whisperer (al-waswási), Who whispereth in man’s breast—Against djinn and men.

(114:1-6, Rodwell)

This image is also used by mystical poets. Óáfiz. writes:

In love’s path (ráh-i-‘ishq) Ahriman’s8 temptations (vasvasiy-i-Ahriman) are many:

Sense keep; and to Surúsh’s9 message the ear of the heart put. (Díván 744, “Ghazalyát,” no.444, v.6; Divan 411, no.398, v.2)

Bahá’u’lláh uses the same image in other passages, as for example:

A Hymn to Love

237

Keep us safe, then, through Thine unfailing protection, O Thou the Beloved of the entire creation and the Desire of the whole universe, from them whom Thou hast made to be the manifestations of the Evil Whisperer, who whispers (yuwaswisúna) in men’s breasts
(βudúru’ n-nás). (PM233, sec.144, para.2; Munáját 156)

Know verily that Knowledge is of two kinds: Divine and Satanic. The one welleteth out from the fountain of divine inspiration; the other is but a reflection of vain and obscure thoughts. The source of the former is God Himself; the motive-force of the latter the whisperings of selfish desire (vasávas-i-nafsání). (KI69, para.76; KMI53)

Sharp must be thy sight, O Dhabí?, and adamant thy soul, and brass-like thy feet, if thou wishest to be unshaken by the assaults of the selfish desires that whisper (vasávis) in men's breasts. (GWB245-6, sec. CXV, para.13)

. . . in whose soul (nafs) Satan (Shayṭán) hath whispered (waswasa) (qtd. in GPB141, sec.8, para.30)10

The Evil Whisperer, mentioned by Bahá'u'lláh and in the Koran (al-waswási) and related by Bahá'u'lláh to Satan (shayṭán), seems to be the human lower nature personified as Satan, a nature to which Bahá'u'lláh refers as "the Satan of self (shayṭán-i-nafs)" (KI112; KMI84). This lower nature is our ego, that is proud of itself and pretends to be self-sufficient. It is the "serpent" that seduced Eve in the Garden of Eden. The Bible says: "Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made" (Genesis 3:1 KJB). The Hebrew word used to refer to the serpent in this verse is nâchâsh, from the verb nâchash, "to hiss, i.e. whisper" (Strong, "A Concise Dictionary" 78, no.5172). In one of His talks 'Abdu'l-Bahá explained that "the evil spirit, Satan or whatever is interpreted as evil, refers to the lower nature in man" (PUP294). He explained the same concept in a Letter in which He mentions certain friends that had asked Him advice on material aspects of their lives. He is reported to have answered:

238

Lights of Irfán vol. 16

Tell them they should do as they think best in these matters. Should they marry, divorce, leave their homes, move to other places, etc.,—all these matters pertaining to their material affairs—Abdul Baha says:

"They must do as they wish; they must solve their own problems; they are grown-ups. We do not like to tell people what they should do in these matters. My work is universal; my time and thoughts are for the whole world on the most important problems relating to affairs that concern the spiritual welfare of nations and individuals. When the believers are insistent, Abdul Baha must give them answers, and it is their wish always that Abdul Baha grants them. He knows what their wish in reality is. They must make mistakes to learn, and to unfold the higher which is within themselves. The initial wish does not come from Abdul Baha. It comes from them. It is generally clothed with such words as these: 'We only wish to do that which Abdul Baha wishes us to do.' And they are sincere in this, for they do not know the subtlety of the ego of man. It is the Tempter (the subtle serpent of the mind), and the poor soul not entirely emancipated from its suggestions is deceived until entirely severed from all save God.” (qtd. in Baha’i Scriptures 487, sec.936)

As to the flesh, the adjective nafsání, “Lewd, sensual; spiritual, vital” (Steingass 1416), derives from nafs, that sometimes in Persian corresponds to that which we call flesh, in the sense of the weak side of man, that side which indulges to sin. Muḥliḥ ad-Dín Sa’dí (ca.1184–1291) writes.

How will know the truth of love (?aqíqat-i-‘ishq) he who is subjected to the passions of the flesh (haváy-i-nafsání)? (“Ghazalyát,” no.610, v.8)

A Hymn to Love

239

Bahá’u’lláh writes in His Lawh-i-Laylatu’l-Quds: “Burn away, wholly for the sake of the Well-Beloved (al-Ma’búb), the veil of self (?ujubát-i-nafsáníyyih)” (316, para.1; Muntakhabátí 203). In the Seven Valleys He mentions “the veils of the Satanic self (?ijáb-háy-i-nafs-i-shayṭání)” (SV7; Haft Vádí 102) that must be burnt by the fire of love so that the mystical seeker may enter the Valley of Knowledge (SV12). This is one of the main functions of the mystic wine, the Word of God, assisting the soul to proceed from the stage of the nafs-i-ammarih, the commanding soul, or the insistent self, to higher stages of her spiritual evolution.

Zán áb kaz-ú shud búrat-i-átash paydá,
Zán nár kaz-ú z. áhir án Kawthar-i-Rú’ání.

A drop of water revealing the form of Fire,
A sparkle of fire manifesting the celestial Fount.

The combination of wine, fire and water continues in the second distich. The first hemistich identifies wine, here called water, áb, and fire—átash, in the first hemistich and nár in the second. Wine is fire, because it is conducive to the intoxication of love that burns away, as a fire, the veils of the Satanic self. The fire of wine also is the celestial Fount (kawthar-i-rú’ání), because wine also is water of life, that is the Word of God. The word Kawthar (literally, abundance) is mentioned in Súra 108, “Truly we have given thee an abundance” (108:1, Rodwell). Edward William Lane (1801–1876), the leading British Arabicist scholar who authored the monumental Arabic-English Lexicon, describes Kawthar as “A certain river in paradise . . . from which flow all the [other] river thereof . . . pertaining specially to the Prophet, described as being whiter than milk and sweeter than honey and as having its margin composed of pavilions of hollowed pearls” (Lane 7:122). The word has a connotation of abundance, because it derives from the Arabic root kithara, “It was, or became, much, copious, abundant, many, numerous, great in number or quantity; it multiplied; it accumulated” (Lane 7:121). It is the Water of Life, a recurrent motif of both Sufi literature and Bahá’í Writings. In the first case it has mythical and legendary connotations, in the second it is a poetic image to describe mostly the Words of the Manifestation of God and their regenerating power.

240 Lights of Irfán vol. 16

Yik jilvih11 zi12 ‘aks-ash bar ßaf?iy-i-Ján uftád, Válih shud13 az án jilvih ßad ?ikmat-i-Yúnání.

A glimmer of His image fell on the page of the Soul,
A hundred Hellenic wisdoms were confounded.

The “glimmer (jilvih) of His image” is the unveiling of the Beloved. This is one of the meanings of the word jilvih, “Presenting a bride to her husband adorned and unveiled; the meeting of the bride and bridegroom; the nuptial bed; the bridal ornaments; splendour, lustre, effulgence, transfiguration” (Steingass 369). However here it has been translated “glimmer” following the example of Shoghi Effendi who translated it as “splendour” (SWAB32, sec.15).

The “page of the Soul (ßaf?iy-i-Ján)” is another typical image of Sufi poetry. Rúmí mentions in his Mathnaví an equivalent locution, “the leaf (surface) of the heart (varaq-i-dil).” Varaq means “A leaf of a tree or of paper; paper cut out into any shape” (Steingass 1464). He writes:

God hath given thee the polishing instrument (ßayqal), Reason (‘aql), to the end thereby the leaf (surface) of the heart (varaq-i-dil) may be made resplendent. (4:2475)

It is the soul, here compared to a page, reflecting the Beauty of the Beloved. This verse by Rúmí also mentions a “polishing instrument (ßayqal), Reason (‘aql).” A “polishing instrument” is also mentioned in the Valley of Love: “A pure heart is as a mirror; cleanse it with the burnish of love (ßayqal-i-?ubb) and severance from all save God, that the true sun may shine within it and the eternal morning dawn” (SV21; Haft Vádí 113). This first hemistich is reminiscent of the words of Genesis:
A Hymn to Love 241

Let us make man in our image, after our likeness. (Genesis 1:26)

It also is reminiscent of the following Tradition:

God created Adam in His image (khalaqa Alláh ádama ‘alá búratihí). (qtd. in Schimmel, Mystical Dimensions 188; Furúzánfár no.595)

It finally reminds us of the Aristotelian “tabula rasa,” the unscribed tablet.¹⁴ The soul is seemingly described as a page upon which the beautiful features of the Face of the Lord can be drawn.

The second hemistich hints at the impotence of philosophy, the “hundred Hellenic wisdoms,” and thus of the human intellect, when it is not assisted by Revelation. This concept was later on developed by Bahá’u’lláh in His Law? -i-Óikmat, in which He states that Greece was “a Seat of Wisdom for a prolonged period” (149-50). Then He adds:

Although it is recognized that the contemporary men of learning are highly qualified in philosophy, arts and crafts, yet were anyone to observe with a discriminating eye he would readily comprehend that most of this knowledge hath been acquired from the sages of the past [i.e. the Greek philosophers], for it is they who have laid the foundation of philosophy, reared its structure and reinforced its pillars . . . The sages aforetime acquired their knowledge from the Prophets, inasmuch as the latter were the Exponents of divine philosophy and the Revealers of heavenly mysteries. Men quaffed the crystal, living waters of Their utterance, while others satisfied themselves with the dregs. Everyone receiveth a portion according to his measure . . . The essence and the fundamentals of philosophy have emanated from the Prophets. That the people differ concerning the inner meanings and mysteries thereof is to be attributed to the divergence of their views and minds. (144-5, comment in brackets added)
242 Lights of Irfán vol. 16

Yik jadhvih az án shu‘lih bar Sidriy-i-Síná zad, Madhúsh az án jadhvih ßad Músíy-i-‘Imrání.

A spark of that flame hit the Tree of Sinai,
A hundred Imranite Moseses were astounded.

This distich refers to the story of Moses, the Burning Bush and Moses’s swoon when God showed Himself to Him. Fire seems here identified with the Most Great Spirit. Lambden comments upon this verse as follows:

So powerful is the fiery “water” of the stunning Divine

Cupbearer (sáqí) that but a “firebrand” (jadhwa) ignited from its flame in the Sinaitic Lote-Tree would suffice to throw one hundred Imranite Moseses into a state of bewildered astonishment. (116)

Moses is called Imranite from the name, Imran, which Muslim tradition ascribes to His father, called Amran in the Bible (Exodus 6:20).

Yik shu ‘lih az án ádash shud, ‘Ishq15 bi-zad khar-gáh
Dar áb-u gil-i-ádam ham dar dil-i-insání.

A flame burst out from that fire and Love pitched
A Hymn to Love 243

Its tent in man’s water and clay and in his heart.

This distich refers to the legend that man is moulded of water and clay, mentioned by many Persian poets. For example Rúmí writes in this vein in his Mathnaví:

Where were we when the Judge of Judgement (Day) was sowing reason (‘aql) in the water and clay (‘ab-u †ín) of Adam? (6:3134)

Bahá’u’lláh also uses this image in later Writings:

He must purge his breast, which is the sanctuary of the abiding love of the Beloved, of every defilement, and sanctify his soul from all that pertaineth to water and clay (áb-u-gil), from all shadowy and ephemeral attachments. (KI192; KMI149)

Ye are even as the bird which soareth, with the full force of its mighty wings and with complete and joyous confidence, through the immensity of the heavens, until, impelled to satisfy its hunger, it turneth longingly to the water and clay (áb-u-gil) of the earth below it, and, having been entrapped in the mesh of its desire, findeth itself impotent to resume its flight to the realms whence it came. (Law?-i-A?mad bi-Fársí 327, para.6; Muntakhabátí 210)

I fear lest, bereft of the melody of the dove of heaven, ye will sink back to the shades of utter loss, and, never having gazed upon the beauty of the rose, return to water and clay (áb-u gil). (HW, Persian, no.13; Ad‘íyyih 428)

Elsewhere Bahá’u’lláh uses the Arabic word má’, water, in the place of the Persian áb, and the word turáb, “ground, earth, dust” (Steingass 291), in the place of gil:

Magnified be Thy name, O Lord my God! I know not what the water (má’) is with which Thou hast created me, or what the fire (nár) Thou hast kindled within me, or the clay (turáb) wherewith Thou hast kneaded me.

 (PM12, sec.9, para.1, Munáját 12)

This distich seemingly explains that the bestowal of Spirit (Fire) introduces love into the nature of man (his water and clay), and his heart. In this regard, it seems that spirit is the same as love. In this vein, ‘Abdu’l-Bahá states: “love is the cause of the existence of all phenomena” (PUP255) and also: “The greatest power in the realm and range of human existence is spirit—the divine breath which animates and pervades all things” (PUP58). Love and spirit are described as two similar powers, on which the whole existence has its foundations. Indeed, as ‘Abdu’l-Bahá reportedly said:

the first principle of God, Love, is the creative principle. Love is an outpour from God, and is pure spirit. (‘Abdu’l-Bahá, qtd. in Bahá’í Scriptures 300, no.609)

This distich seemingly says that love permeates both the water and clay of man, and his heart. The locution “water and clay” seems an image denoting human flesh, the element whereby man is a weak creature. As to the heart, in the Sufi world, the heart is, first, the organ of the inner knowledge of transcendent reality that Sufis call ma‘rifa. Second, it is the seat of the divine presence. And, third, it is the organ that is attracted towards what is other than it (see Savi, 51-3). Therefore this distich could denote that through the bestowals of Spirit love takes possession of man as a whole. This distich is reminiscent of a ghazal by Óafi.z that says:

(O true beloved!) in eternity without beginning (the day of mißák),¹⁶ of glory, the splendour-ray of Thy beauty boasted.

Revealed became love; and, upon all the world, fire dashed.

A Hymn to Love

245

(O absolute existence!) Thy face displayed splendour; (and) beheld (that) the angel had no (capacity for) love:

From this (exceeding) jealousy, it became the essence of fire; and upon Adam dashed.

From that torch (of love), reason wished to kindle its lamp, Jealousy’s lightning flashed; and in confusion, the world dashed.

The adversary (Shaiṭán)¹⁷ sought to come to the spectacle-place of the mystery (of love):

The invisible hand (of God) came, and, at the heart of the excluded one (Shaiṭán), dashed.

Others, all on ease, dashed the dice of partition (fate):
Our grief-experienced heart it was that also, on grief (the dice of fate) cast.

The desire of thy chin's dimple (thy mysteries) possessed the lofty soul:

At the ring of that tress, curt with curl, (his) hand, he dashed.

The joy-book of love for Thee, Óáfi.z wrote on that day, When, on the head of the chattels of his joyous heart, the reed (of cancellation), he dashed. (Díván 354-55, “Ghazalyát,” no.186; Divan 158-9, no.152)

Ay ‘Ishq, chih í Tú, kaz Tú jahán pur áshúb, Ham az Tú dar ámad ?asrat18 dar ?ikmat-i-Luqmání.

Who art Thou, O Love, that ‘cause of Thee the world,
Is in turmoil and Luqman’s wisdom is envious?

246

Lights of Irfán vol. 16

The world of love is the world of paradoxes. No wonder that love throws the word into turmoil, áshúb, “Terror, dread, fear; grief, affliction, misfortune; confusion, discord, disturbance, tumult, riot, sedition” (Steingass 67). Bahá’u’lláh writes in the Seven Valleys:

Love setteth a world aflame at every turn, and he wasteth every land where he carrieth his banner. Being hath no existence in his kingdom; the wise wield no command within his realm. The leviathan of love swalloweth the master of reason and destroyeth the lord of knowledge. He drinketh the seven seas, but his heart’s thirst is still unquenched, and he saith, “Is there yet any more?” He shunneth himself and draweth away from all on earth. (SV10)

In the world of love many things turn upside down. It is this reversal that arises the feeling of wonderment in the lovers.
Bahá’u’lláh says about wonderment: “How many a mystic tree hath this whirlwind of wonderment (?ayrat) snatched by the roots, how many a soul hath it exhausted” (SV31; Haft Vádí 124).
As to turmoil, one remembers at this point the tumultuous events, whose protagonist or spectator Bahá’u’lláh had just been: the Conference of Badasht in June 1848, the Mázindarán upheaval, with the battle of the Fort of Shaykh ?abarsí, that began in late summer of 1848 and ended in the spring of 1849, the slaughter of the Sevens Martyrs of Teheran in February 1850, the upheaval of Nayríz, in the late spring of 1850, the massacre that followed the attempt on the life of the Shah on 15 August 1852 . . . Iran had really been in turmoil.

And yet the folly of love conceals a great wisdom, a wisdom for which even Luqman, the legendary sage mentioned in the Koran (31:11-8), that in post-Koranic literature is described as a fabulist, a Muslim Aesop (see Savi 202-3), becomes full of envy. The folly of love is the wisdom of the person that has become detached from the water and clay of the world and has placed all his affections on the eternal world, wherefrom his soul comes and whereto she is returning. While so doing, this person gives a meaning to each instant of her life, that she does not live in the superficiality of its contingent and ephemeral meanings, but in the inner depth of the Absolute that transpires thereof. All this, as poetical and mystic as it is, is taught by Bahá'u'lláh in an extremely rational and practical way. This transparency of absolute appears in the actions of a human beings, whenever he is prompted by the sincere intention of serving humankind to promote its ever-advancing civilization.
A Hymn to Love 247

Gáh kuní da'ví kih Man-am jilviy-i-Ma?búb bi 'álam.
Gáh gúy kih Man-am khúd án ?al'at-i-Sub?ání.

Now Thou boastest: "I am the Beloved's splendour in the world."

Now Thou proclaimest: "I'm Myself that Divine Countenance."

In this verse begins a description of Love, in its various aspects, each of which conveys a mystical meaning. Love is "the Beloved's splendour in the world (jilviy-i-Ma?búb bi 'álam)." This sentence is reminiscent of words written and uttered by 'Abdu'l-Bahá:

Know thou of a certainty that Love is the secret of God's holy Dispensation, the manifestation of the All-Merciful, the fountain of spiritual outpourings. Love is heaven's kindly light, the Holy Spirit's eternal breath that vivifieth the human soul. Love is the cause of God's revelation unto man, the vital bond inherent, in accordance with the divine creation, in the realities of things. (SWAB27, sec.12)

248

Lights of Irfán vol. 16

Know thou, the first bounty from the True One is love, unity and harmony, and without these all the deeds pass in vain and give no result. Love is the result of the Manifestation and the glorious purpose of the rising of Light on the Mount, in the Sinai of the Forgiving Lord.

(TAB1:183-4)

Love is the first effulgence of Divinity . . . (PUP338)

Love is, in reality, the first effulgence of Divinity and the greatest splendor of God. (PUP397)

Love is the breath of the Holy Spirit in the heart of Man. (PT20, sec.6, para.12)

Love is the “Divine Countenance (?al‘at-i-Sub?ání).” ‘Abdu’l-Bahá writes about the word “face:”

The word “face” (vajh) hath many meanings, among which there is submissiveness to the Will of God (ri?á), as God, exalted be He, says: “Seeking His Face” [Koran 6:52], and also: “We feed you for the sake of God alone” [Koran 76:9], and moreover His good-pleasure (ri?á). And the face also means the Essence (dhát). God, exalted be He, says: “Everything . . . will perish except His own Face” [Koran 28:88]. And the face (vajh) also means the unveiling (jilwat). God, exalted be He, says:

“whithersoever ye turn, there is the Presence of God” [Koran 2:115]. And the face (vajh) hath various interpretations and allusions, beside what hath been said. However, due to lack of time, it hath been chosen not to expatiate on the subject. On the basis of all this, submission (taslím) of the face [of the believer] is one of the special virtues of the righteous and of the greatest gifts of the free. Whosoever is so aided is graciously favored with absolute faith in the highest level of certitude and assurance. (Makátíb 1:396)19

A Hymn to Love

249

‘Abdu’l-Bahá has repeatedly stated that “God is Love” (PUP158), and has explained that “Christ has said God is Love” (PT192, sec.58, para.2), possibly referring to the following verses:

He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love. (1 John 4:8, KJV)

God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. (1 John 4:16, KJV) ‘Abdu’l-Bahá has also hinted at this concept in various other contexts. He is quoted as stating:

God is Love and Peace. God is Truth. God is Omniscience. God is without beginning and without end. God is uncreated and uncreating, yet the Source, the Causeless Cause. God is pure Essence, and cannot be said to be anywhere or in any place. (qtd. in Bahá’í Scriptures 300, no.609)

God is love; God seeketh fellowship, purity, sanctity and long-suffering; these are the attributes of Divinity. (PUP290)

For God is love, and all phenomena find source and emanation in that divine current of creation. The love of God haloes all created things. Were it not for the love of God, no animate being would exist. (PUP315)

Chún az Tú vazad bar ján rá'iy-i-Jánán, Bar har chih kuní da'ví gúyad20 kih bih az ání.

Since Thou breathest the Beloved's fragrance upon the soul, Whatever claim Thou advancest, one might say Thou art much greater.

250

Lights of Irfán vol. 16

Love sheds "the Beloved's fragrance upon the soul (bar ján rá'iy-i-Jánán)." The image of perfume is widely used in Sufi literature. We remember here that the fragrance of the Beloved is a symbol of His bounties. Love brings the bounties of the Beloved. Whatever bounty He bestows, it is but a reflection of the Beauty of God. In this vein Bahá'u'lláh writes:

O My Well-Beloved! Thou hast breathed Thy Breath into Me, and divorced Me from Mine own Self. Thou didst, subsequently, decree that no more than a faint reflection, a mere emblem of Thy Reality within Me be left among the perverse and envious. (GWB89, sec. XL, para.1)

These sanctified Mirrors, these Day-springs of ancient glory are one and all the Exponents on earth of Him Who is the central Orb of the universe, its Essence and ultimate Purpose. From Him proceed their knowledge and power; from Him is derived their sovereignty. The beauty of their countenance is but a reflection of His image, and their revelation a sign of His deathless glory. (KI99-100, para.106)

The Manifestation of God, the apex of the spiritual hierarchy in the world, is Himself but a reflection of the Beauty of God. And yet, the Manifestation of God is "the Supreme Goal (maqṣad-aqṣá) and Most Sublime Summit (dhurviy-i-'ulyá)" (ESW147; Law?-i Mubárah-i-khaṭáb 96), "the world's Ultimate Desire (gháyat-i-quṣvá), the Summit (dhurviy-i-'ulyá) and Day Spring of Glory (ufuq-i-a'lá)" (GWB345, sec. CLXIV, para.7; Muntakhabátí 221).

Ham Mú'nis-i-jání, ham Áyiy21-i-Jánání,

Ham jam‘íyat-i-ján-há az Tú,22 ham az Tú paríshání.

Thou art the Companion of the soul, the Sign of the Beloved,

A Hymn to Love

251

From Thee tranquillity of spirit cometh, from Thee distress.

Love is “the Companion (mú’nis) of the soul.” Mú’nis means “A companion, intimate friend; a solacer, comforter” (Steingass 1349). Bahá’u’lláh turns to God using this Name in many prayers, as for example:

I implore Thee, O Thou Who art the beloved Companion (mú’nis) of Bahá . . . (PM15, sec.13, para.2; Munáját 16)

I beseech Thee, O Thou Who art my Companion (mú’nisí) in my lowliness . . . (PM16, sec.14, par. 2; Munáját 16)

Let Thine everlasting melodies breathe tranquillity on me, O my Companion (mú’nisí) . . . (PM248, sec.155, para.1; Munáját 167)

Love is “the Sign of the Beloved (Áyiy-i-Jánání).” Áyih means “A mark, a sign; a miracle; a verse of the Qur’án; (met.) an accomplished master” (Steingass 128). Bahá’u’lláh writes in His Law?-i-Hadí:

From the exalted source, and out of the essence of His favor and bounty He hath entrusted every created thing with a sign (áyih) of His knowledge (‘irfán), so that none of His creatures may be deprived of its share in expressing, each according to its capacity and rank, this knowledge. This sign (áyih) is the mirror of His beauty in the world of creation. The greater the effort exerted for the refinement of this sublime and noble mirror, the more faithfully will it be made to reflect the glory of the names and attributes of God, and reveal the wonders of His signs and knowledge. Every created thing will be enabled (so great is this reflecting power) to reveal the potentialities of its pre-ordained station, will recognize

252

Lights of Irfán vol. 16

its capacity and limitations, and will testify to the truth that “He, verily, is God; there is none other God besides Him.” . . . (262, para.2; Muntakhabátí 168)

And ‘Abdu’l-Bahá explains:

. . . all the divine Manifestations suffered, offered their lives and blood, sacrificed their existence, comfort and all they possessed for the sake of mankind. Therefore consider how much they love. Were it not for their love for humanity, spiritual love would be mere nomenclature. Were it not for their illumination, human souls would not be radiant. How effective is their love! This is a sign of the love of God; a ray of the Sun of Reality. (PUP257)

Love brings tranquillity and distress. It is another of the many paradoxes characterizing the condition of love. A lover achieves tranquillity because he discovered “the Beloved (al-Maʿbúb) of his heart, and the Object of his desire (al-Madhkúr)” (PM108, sec.66, para.9; Munáját 78). However, his heart also is distressed, because the lover is aware of his ideal remoteness from the Beloved, and of his meanness, and also because he longs for spiritual growth and self-sacrifice. As Bahá’u’lláh writes:

Though my body be pained by the trials that befall me from Thee, though it be afflicted by the revelations of Thy Decree, yet my soul rejoiceth at having partaken of the waters of Thy Beauty, and at having attained the shores of the ocean of Thine eternity. Doth it beseem a lover to flee from his beloved (al-maʿbúb), or to desert the object of his heart’s desire (maʿashúq)? Nay, we all believe in Thee, and eagerly hope to enter Thy presence. (PM96, sec.60, para.3; Munáját 70)

A Hymn to Love

253

Gar partawí az Rúy-at dar Mißr-i-Ilahí²⁴ árand, Bíní bi-kharídári ßad Yúsuf-i-Kanʿaní.

If a ray from Thy Face shineth on the Divine realms,²⁵
Thou wilt see a hundred Cananaean Josephs put up for sale.

This distich refers to the story of Joseph, son of Jacob, sold as a slave by his brothers and, after many vicissitudes, become viceroy of Egypt. Here the Face of the Beloved matches the beautiful Joseph. Whenever a ray of the face of the Beloved shines in the realm of love, it is as if a hundred Josephs were put up for sale.

Ham búy-i-qamíß az Tú, ham Rúʿ-i-Masíʿ az Tú, Ham Musíy-i-bayʿáʿí, ham shuʿliy-i-Fárání.

From Thee Joseph’s fragrance²⁶ bloweth; from Thee the Messianic Spirit;

Thou art the white-handed Moses, Thou, the flame on Mount Paran.

Love is successively identified with Joseph, described through the image of the scent of his garment (qamíß); with Jesus, described through two among His attributes known in the Moslem world, Spirit and His Messianic Station; and Moses, described through the image of His white hand and of the Burning Bush. In later Writings Bahá'u'lláh identified Himself with all these three Personages. As to Joseph, Bahá'u'lláh describes Him as a "Prophet (nabí)" together with "Jesus, Moses . . . and Mu?ammad" (KI254, para.282; KMI197), and writes about Him:

254

Lights of Irfán vol. 16

Dust fill your mouths, and ashes blind your eyes, for having bartered away the Divine Joseph for the most paltry of prices. (GWB208, sec. CIII, para.4)

As to Moses, He writes in His Súriy-i-Damm:

Praise be to Thee, O Lord My God, for the wondrous revelations of Thy inscrutable decree and the manifold woes and trials Thou hast destined for Myself. At one time Thou didst deliver Me into the hands of Nimrod [Abraham]; at another Thou hast allowed Pharaoh's rod to persecute Me [Moses] . . . (88, para.1, added terms in brackets)

As to Jesus, He writes:

Again I was crucified for having unveiled to men's eyes the hidden gems of Thy glorious unity, for having revealed to them the wondrous signs of Thy sovereign and everlasting power [Jesus]. (Súriy-i-Damm 88, para.1, added terms in brackets)

O Jews! If ye be intent on crucifying once again Jesus, the Spirit of God, put Me to death, for He hath once more, in My person, been made manifest unto you. (GWB101, sec. XLVII, para.1)

This distich seems to foreshadow the concept of the "essential unity" of the Messengers of God later on explained in greater details:

These Manifestations of God have each a twofold station. One is the station of pure abstraction and essential unity. In this respect, if thou callest them all by one name, and dost ascribe to them the same attribute, thou hast not erred from the truth. Even as He hath revealed: “No distinction do We make between any of His Messengers!” For they one and all summon the people of the earth to acknowledge the Unity of God, and herald unto them the Kawthar of an infinite grace and bounty. They are all invested with the robe of Prophethood, and honoured with the mantle of glory. Thus hath Muḥammad, the Point of the Qur’án, revealed: “I am all the Prophets.” Likewise, He saith: “I am the first Adam, Noah, Moses, and Jesus.” Similar statements have been made by ‘Alí. Sayings such as this, which indicate the essential unity of those Exponents of Oneness, have also emanated from the Channels of God’s immortal utterance, and the Treasuries of the gems of divine knowledge, and have been recorded in the scriptures. These Countenances are the recipients of the Divine Command, and the day-springs of His Revelation. This Revelation is exalted above the veils of plurality and the exigencies of number. Thus He saith: “Our Cause is but one.” Inasmuch as the Cause is one and the same, the Exponents thereof also must needs be one and the same. (KI152-3, para.161)

A Hymn to Love 255

Sar-há bi-kamand-at bastih, dil-há az²⁷ gham-at khashthih, Ham ‘ámíy-i-shaydá’í, ham ‘álim-i-Rabbání.

Bound are the heads by Thy locks, pierced the hearts
by Thine anguish, be they of insane laymen or of Divine sages.

The first hemistich presents the image of the hair of the Beloved—kamand, “A halter, noose, snare, lasso; slip-knot; a scaling-ladder . . . a lock of hair” (Steingass 1051)—that tie the lovers. Bausani writes that “the most common mystical explanation” of the hair of the Beloved is that it “symbolizes the ‘plurality of the phenomenal world that veils the face of God’s unity’” (Religion in Iran 280-1). It also presents the image of the anguish of the lovers—gham, “Being cloudy (day); being intensely hot and suffocating; making sad; muzzling; covering; grief, sadness, anxiety, trouble, care; a source of regret; remorse; mourning, lamentation; loss” (Steingass 894). The second hemistich describes the universal effects of the love for the Beloved on all lovers, “Be they of insane laymen (‘ámíy-i-shaydá’í) or of Divine sages (‘álim-i-Rabbání).” ‘Ámí means “Blind, ignorant” (Steingass 868); shaydá’, “mad, insane, in love” (Steingass 772); ‘álim, “Learned, intelligent, wise” (Steingass 831);

256 Lights of Irfán vol. 16

and rabbání, “Divine, godly” (Steingass 567). The two categories of seekers mentioned in this verse could be the same as the “men of mind (muṭáli‘ín) and heart (mushtáqín)” of the Four Valleys (FV63; Chihár Vádí 154). It is the ancient division between those who preferred the path of sobriety of asceticism and those who preferred the inebriation of the way of love.

Man khúd zi Tú-am makhmúr, ham az Tú shudam mashhúr, Kih²⁸ dahí-am ßad ján, ham²⁹ kih kuní-am qurbání.

I'm drunk of Thee, 'cause of Thee I'm notorious, whether Thou offerest me a hundred lives, or Thou slayest me.

The lover proclaims his love for the Beloved. This love made him commit such foolish acts that now everyone talks about him and he has become mashhúr, that is, “public, notorious, well-known; published, divulged, conspicuous; celebrated, illustrious, noted, famous” (Steingass 1250). This is another trope of Sufi poetry, belonging to the malámatí strand. Marcello Perego, an Italian expert on Sufism, defines the malámatí Sufis as “persons who observe a perfect religious conduct, but carefully hide any ecstatic state (Aḡwál) and grace (Wáridát) which the One Being bestows upon them; they dissemble their good deeds, so that none but God may know them” (151). A number of Sufis of the malámatiyya tried to appear blameworthy in the eyes of common people. The second hemistich restates the concept of the faithfulness of the lover, independently of the attitude of the Beloved.

A Hymn to Love

257

Gar Qábi?-i-arvá?í, az chih kuní-am zindih?
Var Mu?iy-i-abdání, az chih kuní thu‘bání.

If Thou art the Angel of death, how come that Thou revivest me?

And if Thou art the Reviver of bodies, how is it that Thou attest as a snake?

This distich presents another oxymoron. So cruel is the Beloved that the lover compares Him to the Angel of death, Qábi?-i-arvá?í, literally the sequestrator of spirits. And yet from Him life comes. And if He gives life, why does He act as cruelly as a thu‘bání, that is, “A large male serpent, a dragon, cockatrice, basilisk” (Steingass 345)? It seems the human reaction of a person when faced by the “onrushing winds of . . . [God’s] decree (qaḡá)” (PM12, sec.9, para.2. Munáját 13). Bahá’u’lláh wrote in His Súriy-i-Haykal:

Should We choose, at one time, to shed the radiance of

The gracious pace of the Beloved is a Sufi motif of Persian mystical poetry. Óáfi.z writes in this vein:

If, like the (lofty) cypress (sarv), a moment thou move in a rose-garden (gulzár)

In envy of thy face (rúy), every rose (gul) suffereth a thorn. (Díván 901, “Ghazalyát,” no.552, v.1; Divan 456, “Ghazalyát,” no.443, v.1)

This distich by Bahá’u’lláh exalts the power of the Beloved,
Who can change a king into His humble vassal and bestow royal greatness upon a servant. As to the capacity to subdue a sovereign, Bahá’u’lláh writes about Muhammad in the Kitáb-iġqán: “Behold, how many are the Sovereigns who bow the knee before His name!” (KI110, para.117). And the Báb reportedly said to His disciples:

Heed not your weaknesses and frailty; fix your gaze upon the invincible power of the Lord, your God, the Almighty. Has He not, in past days, caused Abraham, in spite of His seeming helplessness, to triumph over the forces of Nimrod? Has He not enabled Moses, whose staff was His only companion, to vanquish Pharaoh and his hosts? Has He not established the ascendancy of Jesus, poor and lowly as He was in the eyes of men, over the combined forces of the Jewish people? Has He not subjected the barbarous and militant tribes of Arabia to the holy and transforming discipline of Muhammad, His Prophet? (qtd. in Nabíl 94)

As to the capacity to change a servant into a king, the Báb reportedly said to His disciples:

You are the lowly, of whom God has thus spoken in His Book: “And We desire to show favour to those who were brought low in the land, and to make them
260 Lights of Irfán vol. 16

spiritual leaders among men, and to make them Our heirs.” You have been called to this station; you will attain to it, only if you arise to trample beneath your feet every earthly desire, and endeavour to become those “honoured servants of His who speak not till He hath spoken, and who do His bidding.” (qtd. ibid. 93)

And ‘Abdu’l-Bahá wrote about Jesus:

Peter was a fisherman and Mary Magdalene a peasant, but as they were specially favoured with the blessings of Christ, the horizon of their faith became illumined, and down to the present day they are shining from the horizon of everlasting glory. (SWAB105, sec.68)

Yik shu‘lih³⁰ zi³¹ rúy-at dar gul-bun-i-Ján ámad, Afrúkht jamál-i-ján chún láliy-i-nu‘mání.

A spark of Thy face fell upon the rose-bush of the soul,
And lit its beauty as a crimson tulip.

This distich uses many images typical of Persian mystical literature: the “spark (shu‘lih)” of the face (rúy), “the rose-bush of the soul (gul-bun-i-Ján),” the “crimson tulip (láliy-i-nu‘mání).” The image of the face has been explained above (see above verse 7). This verse seems to use the image of the Face of the Beloved to hint at the Beauty of the Beloved, at His influence on the lover and at the unveiling of His Beauty. As to the rose (gul), in the Sufi world it “is the supreme manifestation of Divine beauty or the symbol of the beloved cheek” (Schimmel, Deciphering 26). As to the tulip (lálih), “poets have tended to compare the red tulip that looks indeed like a flame to the fire on the sacred mountain [Sinai]” (ibid. 10). Óáfí.z uses the image of the tulip in the following verse:

A Hymn to Love

261

In the garden (bágh) (of the existence), renew the usage’s of the faith (dín) of Zardusht.

Now that the (red) tulip (lálih) hath kindled the fire (átash) of Nimrod. (Díván 253, “Ghazalyát,” no.121, v.8; Divan 229, “Ghazalyát,” no.219, v.8)

Óáfí.z associates the tulip to the fire of Nimrod, because God has transformed the fire of the furnace, into which Abraham had been thrown, into a garden. Likewise, Bahá’u’lláh associates the tulip to the fire lit by the Beloved in the spiritual worlds, a fire that is as sweet as a garden for the lovers. The tulip described by Bahá’u’lláh is crimson (nu‘mání). In the Muslim world red is connected with life, health, and blood; it is the colour of the bridal veil that seems to guarantee fertility; and it is used as an apotropaic colour. Red wine, as well as fire (in its positive aspects) and the red rose, all point to the Divine Glory, as it is said that the ridá al-kibriyá, “the cloak of Divine Glory,” is radiant red. (Deciphering 16)

This distich seems to describe how the Beauty of the Beloved (the spark of His face) changes the hearts of His lovers (“the rose-bush of the soul”), where He raises the vermilion tulip of knowledge and good deeds. ‘Abdu’l-Bahá spoke diffusely of the transforming power of the Manifestations of God. For example

He said:

The holy Manifestations of God come into the world to dispel the darkness of the animal, or physical, nature of man, to purify him from his imperfections in order that his heavenly and spiritual nature may become quickened, his divine qualities awakened, his perfections visible, his potential powers revealed and all the virtues of the world of humanity latent within him may come to life. These holy Manifestations of God are the Educators and
262 Lights of Irfán vol. 16

Trainers of the world of existence, the Teachers of the world of humanity. They liberate man from the darkness of the world of nature, deliver him from despair, error, ignorance, imperfections and all evil qualities. They clothe him in the garment of perfections and exalted virtues. Men are ignorant; the Manifestations of God make them wise. They are animalistic; the Manifestations make them human. They are savage and cruel; the Manifestations lead them into kingdoms of light and love. They are unjust; the Manifestations cause them to become just. Man is selfish; They sever him from self and desire. Man is haughty; They make him meek, humble and friendly. He is earthly; They make him heavenly. Men are material; the Manifestations transform them into divine semblance. They are immature children; the Manifestations develop them into maturity. Man is poor; They endow him with wealth. Man is base, treacherous and mean; the Manifestations of God uplift him into dignity, nobility and loftiness. (PUP 465-6)

Vah vah, chih nasím ámad, bá muzhdiy-i-ján ámad,³²
Kaz Mashriq-i-Ján ámad án ?al‘at-i-Yazdání.

O! What a breeze wafted announcing to the soul the glad tiding
That from the East of the Spirit that Divine Face hath appeared.

This distich poetically announces the new Revelation. This announcement is brought by the breeze, a reminiscence of the morning breeze that, according to the tradition, brought to Muhammad the scent of the holiness of Uways al-Qaraní who lived in Yemen. This breeze comes from the East, the place whence the sun rises. Rúmí writes:

A Hymn to Love

263

Finally from the Orient of the spirit (mashriq-i-ján), like the sun, arose

He Whom the soul (ján) was searching in private and in public (Díván, “Ghazalyát,” no.142, v.2)

These verses are reminiscent of the following words written by ‘Abdu’l-Bahá:

From the beginning of time until the present day the light of Divine Revelation hath risen in the East and shed its radiance upon the West. The illumination thus shed hath, however, acquired in the West an extraordinary brilliancy. Consider the Faith proclaimed by Jesus. Though it first appeared in the East, yet not until its light had been shed upon the West did the full measure of its potentialities become manifest . . . In the books of the Prophets certain glad-tidings are recorded which are absolutely true and free from doubt. The East hath ever been the dawning-place of the Sun of Truth. In the East all the Prophets of God have appeared . . . The West hath acquired illumination from the East but in some respects the reflection of the light hath been greater in the Occident. This is specially true of Christianity. Jesus Christ appeared in Palestine and His teachings were founded in that country. Although the doors of the Kingdom were first opened in that land and the bestowals of God were spread broadcast from its center, the people of the West have embraced and promulgated Christianity more fully than the people of the East. (qtd. in WOB 74-5)33

The good news is that the Face of God has appeared.

Ján-há bi-paríd az shawq, dil-há bi-ramíd az dhawq,
Ham ‘Ishq shud-ash ‘áshiq ham jawhar-i-imkání.
264 Lights of Irfán vol. 16

Souls soared with yearning, hearts were enraptured in ecstasy,

Love fell in love with Him, and so did the essence of creation.

This distich describes the impact of the advent of the new Revelation. The whole creation falls in love with the Beloved, even Love. Outwardly, when the Manifestation of God appears in the world, nothing happens. On the contrary, an inward process starts that slowly but steadily moves towards the birth of a new civilization. Bahá’u’lláh has often described His Own advent in triumphant words. He wrote for example in His Law?-i-Ri?ván:

This is the Day whereon the unseen world crieth out:
“Great is thy blessedness, O earth, for thou hast been made the foot-stool of thy God, and been chosen as the seat of His mighty throne.” The realm of glory exclaimeth: “Would that my life could be sacrificed for thee, for He Who is the Beloved of the All-Merciful hath established His sovereignty upon thee, through the power of His Name that hath been promised unto all things, whether of the past or of the future.” This is the Day whereon every sweet smelling thing hath derived its fragrance from the smell of My garment—a garment that hath shed its perfume upon the whole of creation. This is the Day whereon the rushing waters of everlasting life have gushed out of the Will of the All-Merciful. Haste ye, with your hearts and souls, and quaff your fill, O Concourse of the realms above! (29, para.6)

Another example are the words whereby He foresees His arrival to the prison of ‘Akká:

Upon Our arrival, We were welcomed with banners of light, whereupon the Voice of the Spirit cried out
A Hymn to Love 265

saying: “Soon will all that dwell on earth be enlisted under these banners.” (qtd. in GPB 184, sec.11, para.4)

In the dimensions of the human world His arrival in ‘Akká is described by Shoghi Effendi as follows:

Having, after a miserable voyage, disembarked at ‘Akká, all the exiles, men, women and children, were, under the eyes of a curious and callous population that had assembled at the port to behold the “God of the Persians,” conducted to the army barracks, where they were locked in, and sentinels detailed to guard them. “The first night,” Bahá’u’lláh testifies in the Law?-i-Ra’ís,³⁴ “all were deprived of either food or drink . . . They even begged for water, and were refused.” So filthy and brackish was the water in the pool of the courtyard that no one could drink it. Three loaves of black and salty bread were assigned to each, which they were later permitted to exchange, when escorted by guards to the market, for two of better quality. (GPB 186-7, sec.11, para.10)

Evidently in the spiritual words, which are not subject to the rules of time and space, things appear in a different perspective than in the earthly world.

Az ?ikmat-i-ú ulfat-i-má-bayin-i-dú ?idd .záhir, Ham ‘Ishq shudih bandih, ham ‘Aql kunad darbání.

Through His wisdom, the coincidence of opposites is made
manifest,
Now love becometh a slave, now the Intellect a porter.

In the Manifestation of God the opposites coincide.
Bahá’u’lláh wrote in later Writings: “I bear witness that in His
266 Lights of Irfán vol. 16

person solidity and fluidity have been joined and combined” (PM48, sec.38, para.3). Bahá’u’lláh explained moreover:

These Prophets and chosen Ones of God are the recipients and revealers of all the unchangeable attributes and names of God. They are the mirrors that truly and faithfully reflect the light of God. Whatsoever is applicable to them is in reality applicable to God, Himself, Who is both the Visible and the Invisible (z. áhir-i-mastúr) . . . Through the manifold attributes of these Essences of Detachment, Who are both the first and the last, the seen and the hidden, it is made evident that He Who is the Sun of Truth is “the First and the Last, the Seen, and the Hidden [Koran 57:3].” (KI142-3; KMI110)

An aspect of this coincidence is the harmonious balance between elements that human beings often see as conflicting with one another, as for example mercy and justice, love and reason, religion and science. This distich explains that, on the one hand, love becomes a slave, possibly of the “divine, universal mind, whose sovereignty enlighteneth all created things” (Four Valleys 52), and, on the other, the Intellect becomes a porter, that is, it submits to Revelation. Rúmí writes in this vein:

O perfect full moon (máh), the house of the heart belongs to Thee,
Intellect that was a lord is wholly submitted to Thee.
(Díván, “Ghazalyát,” no.2243, v.2)

Darvish, ma-dar zín bish ín pardiy-i-asrár, Kaz shahr faghán khízad vaz ‘álam-i-?ayvání.

Stop tearing asunder the veil of mystery, O Dervish:
A cry riseth from the city of men and the world of brutes.
A Hymn to Love 267

This poem, as a few others, ends with a call to silence. The clamour that rises “from the city of men and the world of brutes” could be due to the fact that the city of men is not prepared to receive the Beloved. This verse is reminiscent of the following words by Bahá'u'lláh in His Ri?vánu'l-'Adl:

The fears and agitation which the revelation of this law provokes in men's hearts should indeed be likened to the cries of the suckling babe weaned from his mother's milk, if ye be of them that perceive. (175, para.1)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

- 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Makátib-i-Óa?rat-i-'Abdu'l-Bahá, vol. 1. Bahá'í Publishing Trust, Iran, n.d.
- Bahá'í Scriptures. Selections from the Utterances of Bahá'u'lláh and 'Abdu'l-Bahá. Edited by Horace Holley. Approved by Bahá'í Committee on Publications, 1923. 2nd ed. New York: Brentano's Publisher's, 1928.
- Bahá'i Studies Review. Bahá'í Studies Review. Association for Bahá'í Studies for English-speaking Europe. London, 1991.
- Bahá'u'lláh. Ad'íyyiy-i-Óa?rat-i-Ma?búb [Prayers of Bahá'u'lláh]. Reprinted from the original edition, Egypt, Bahá'í Year 76. Hofheim-Langenhain: Bahá'í-Verlag, 1980.
- . Áthár-i-Qalam-i-A'lá, vol.3. Teheran: Bahá'í Publishing Trust, 129 B.E.(1972–73).
- . Chihár Vádí, in Áthár-i-Qalam-i-A'lá 3:140-57.
- . Fire Tablet, in Bahá'í Prayers 214-20.
- . Haft Vádí, in Áthár-i-Qalam-i-A'lá 3:92-137.
- . Ishráqát (Splendours), in Tablets 101-35.
- . Kitáb-i-Aqdas: The Most Holy Book. Haifa: Bahá'í World Centre, 1992. Arabic edition: Haifa: Bahá'í World Centre, 1995.
- . Kitáb-i-Musta?áb-i-^qán. Reprinted from the original edition, Egypt, 1934. Hofheim-Langenhain: Bahá'í-Verlag, 1980.
- . Law?-i-A?mad bih Fársí (Persian Tablet to A?mad), in Gleanings 322-29, sec. CLII and CLIII.
- 268 Lights of Irfán vol. 16
- . Law?-i-Anta'l-Káfí, in Nafahat-i Fa?l 2:17-22.
- . Law?-i-Dhabíh, in Gleanings 240-6, sec. CXV.
- . Law?-i-Hadí, in Gleanings 164-66, sec. LXXXIII.
- . Law?-i-Óikmat (Tablet of Wisdom), in Tablets 137-52.
- . Lawh-i-Laylatu'l-Quds, in Gleanings 316, sec. CXLVII.
- . Law?-i-Maq?úd (Tablet of Maq?úd), in Tablets, pp.161-78.
- . Law?-i Mubárah-i-kha?áb bih Shaykh Mu?ammad Taqí-yi Mujtahid-i Ißfahání. Hofheim-Langenhain: Bahá'í-Verlag, 1982.
- . Law?-i-Ri?ván (Tablet of Ri?ván), in Gleanings 27-35, sec. XIV.
- . Majmú'iy-i-Áthár-i Qalam-i A'lá [Collected Letters of Bahá'u'llah], vol. 30, Tehran: Iran National Bahá'í Archives Private Printing (INBA) Private Printing, 1976; vol. 36, Teheran: Iran National Baha'i Archives (INBA) Private Printing, 1977.

———. Munáját (Prayers and Meditations). Rio de Janeiro: Editora Baha'i–Brazil, 1981.

———. Múntakhabátí az Áthár-i-Óaʔrat-i-Bahá'u'lláh. Hofheim-Langenhain: Bahá'í-Verlag, 1984.

———. Nafahat-i-Faʔl. Vol. 2. Dundas, Ont.: Persian Institute for Bahá'í Studies, 1988. See <http://reference.bahai.org/fa/t/c/NF2/nf2-1.html> (accessed 9 September 2011).

———. 'Questions and Answers', in Kitáb-i-Aqdas 103-37.

———. Riʔváu'l-ʔAdl, in Gleanings 175, sec. LXXXVIII.

———. Súriy-i-Damm, in Gleanings 88-90, sec. XXXIX.

———. Súriy-i-Haykal (Sura of the Temple), in Summons 3-137.

———. "Bahá'u'lláh's Best Known Works." Bahá'í World.

Vols. 9-20.

Balyuzi, Hasan M. Bahá'u'lláh: The King of Glory. Oxford: George Ronald, 1980.

Bausani, Alessandro. "Ghazal. ii. In Persian literature," in Encyclopaedia of Islam.

———. "La letteratura neopersiana," in Pagliari and Bausani: La letteratura Persiana 133-563.

———. Religion in Iran. Translated by J.M. Marchesi. New York: Bibliotheca Persica Press, 2000.

Blachère, Régis. "Ghazal. i. The Ghazal in Arabic poetry," in Encyclopedia of Islam.

A Hymn to Love

269

Browne, Edward G. A Literary History of Persia. 4 vols. Bethesda, Maryland: Iranbooks, 1997.

Encyclopaedia of Islam. CD-ROM edition v. 1.0. Leiden: Koninklijke Brill NV, 1999.

Fire and Light [Nár va Nú]. A compilation from the Writings of Bahá'u'lláh, 'Abdu'l-Bahá and Shoghi Effendi. Hofheim-Langenhain: Bahá'í Verlag, 1982.

Furúzánfar, Badí' al-Zaman. Aʔadíth va qiḅaḅ-i-Mathnaví: talfiqí az dú kitáb 'Aʔadíthi-Mathnaví' va 'Má'khidh-i- qiḅaḅ va tamthílát-i-

Mathnaví. Edited by Hòsayn Dávúdí. 2nd edn. Teheran: Amír Kabír, 1381 (2002). [AQM]

Óáfí.z, Shams ad-Dín. The Díván-i-Háfiz. Translated by H. Wilberforce Clarke. Bethesda, Maryland: Ibex Publishers, 1997.

Available at http://www.archive.org/stream/thedivan02hafiuoft/thedivan02hafiuoft_djvu.txt (accessed 19 August 2011).

———. The Divan of Hafiz. Teheran: Aban Book Publication, 1387 [2008-2009].

- . Díván-i-ash‘ár. Available at <http://rira.ir/rira/php/?page=view&mod=classicpoems&obj=poet&id=1> (accessed 26 August 2011).
- . (Hâfiz). Il libro del coppiere. Edited by Carlo Saccone. Milan: Luni Editrice, 1998.
- Hillmann, Michael Craig. “Hâfez and the Persian Ghazal, and Wilberforce Clarke’s Translations,” in Óáfí.z, Díván-i-Hâfiz E-EE. Ishráq Khávarí, ‘Abdu’l-Óamíd. Má’iday-i-Ásmání. A compilation of Bahá’í Writings. 9 vols; vol. 4. Teheran: Mu’assisa Millí Maṭbu‘át Amrí, 129 BE (1972).
- Koran, The. Translated from the Arabic by John Meadows Rodwell. Introduction by George Margoliouth. London: Everyman’s Library, 1987.
- Lambden, Stephen N. “Sinaitic Mysteries: Notes on Moses/Sinai Motifs,” in Studies in Honour of the Late Hasan M Balyuzi, pp. 65-183.
- Lane, Edward William. An Arabic-English Lexicon. London and Edinburgh: Williams and Norgate, 1863–93. CD-Rom edition pub. by Thesaurus Islamicus Foundation. Cairo: Tradigital, 2003.
- Lewis, Franklin D. “Poetry as Revelation: Introduction to Bahá’u’lláh’s ‘Mathnaví-i Mubárah,’” in Baha’i Studies Review 9 (1999/2000):101-25.
- 270 Lights of Irfán vol. 16
- . “A Short Poem by ‘Darvish’ Muhammad, Bahá’u’lláh, Saqí az ghayb-i baqá burqa‘ bar afkan az idhár.” An Introduction and Three Versions of Provisional English Translations’, in Lights of ‘Irfán 2:83-91.
- Lights of ‘Irfán*. Papers presented at the ‘Irfán Colloquia and Seminars. Evanston, IL: Haj Mehdi Arjmand Memorial Fund, 2000–. Wilmette, IL: ‘Irfán Colloquia, 2000–.
- Mázandarání, Mírzá Asadu’lláh Fá’íl. Tárikh-i- ,uhúru’l-Óaqq [History of the Manifestation of Truth], vol. 4. Digitally republished, East Lansing, Michigan: H-Bahai, 1998. Available at <http://www.h-net.org/bahai/arabic/vol2/tzh4/tzh4.htm> (accessed 19 August 2011).
- Nabíl-i-A‘zam (Mu‘ammad-i-Zarandi). The Dawn-Breakers: Nabíl’s Narrative of the Early Days of the Bahá’í Revelation. Translated by Shoghi Effendi. New York: Bahá’í Publishing Committee, 1932.
- Pagliaro, Antonino e Alessandro Bausani. La letteratura persiana. Florence: Sansoni Accademia, 1968.
- Perego, Marcello. Le parole del sufismo: Dizionario della spiritualità islamica. Milan: Mimesis, 1998.
- RíRá. Kitábkháníy-i-Ázád-i-Fársí [RiRa]. The Free Persian Digital

Library, providing access to Persian literature in public domain or explicitly authorized for public use. Available at <http://rira.ir/rira/php/> (accessed 19 August 2011).

Rúmí, Jalálu'd-Dín. Díván-i-Shams. Available at <http://rira.ir/rira/php/?page=view&mod=classicpoems&obj=book&id=51> (accessed 26 A 2011).

———. The Mathnawí of Jalálu'd-Dín Rúmí, edited from the oldest manuscripts available: with critical notes, translation and commentary by Reynold A. Nicholson, vols. 2, 4, 6. Warminster, Wiltshire: Trustees of the E.J.W. Gibb Memorial Series, 1926.

———. Mathnaví-i-Ma'naví. Available at <http://rira.ir/rira/php/?page=view&mod=classicpoems&obj=book&id=50> (accessed 26 August 2011).

———. Mystical Poems of Rúmí 2: Second Selection, Poems 201-400. Translated from the Persian by Arthur J. Arberry. Edited by Ehsan Yarshater. Chicago and London: University of Chicago Press, 1991.

Saccone, Carlo. "Sensi e soprasensi nei fragmenta di Hâfez, ovvero introduzione a uno 'stilnovista' persiano," in Il libro del Coppiere 14-66.

A Hymn to Love
271

Sa'dí, Muḅlih ad-Dín. Díván-i-ash'ár. Available at <http://rira.ir/rira/php/?page=view&mod=classicpoems&obj=book&id=41> (accessed 26 August 2011).

Savi, Julio. Towards the Summit of Reality. An introduction to Bahá'u'lláh's Seven Valleys and Four Valleys. Oxford: George Ronald, 2008.

Schimmel, Annemarie. Deciphering the Signs of God: A Phenomenological Approach to Islam. Albany, NY: State University of New York Press, 1994.

———. Mystical Dimensions of Islam. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1975.

Steingass, Francis Joseph. A Comprehensive Persian-English Dictionary Including the Arabic Words and Phrases to be Met with in Persian Literature. London and New York: Routledge, 1998.

Strong, James. 'A Concise Dictionary of the Words in the Hebrew Bible', in The New Strong's Exhaustive Concordance of the Bible.

———. The New Strong's Exhaustive Concordance of the Bible. Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 1990.

Studies in Honor of the Late Hasan M. Balyuzi. Edited by M. Momen. Studies in the Bábí and Bahá'í Religions, vol.5. Los Angeles: Kalimát, 1988.

Taherzadeh, Adib. The Covenant of Bahá'u'lláh, Oxford: George Ronald, 1992.

Wilberforce-Clark, Henri. "Preface," in Óáfi.z, The Díván-i-Háfiz v-xliv.

NOTES

The poems are listed according to their growing length.

See also excerpts in Mázandarání 142-43.

See also Majmú'iy-i-Áthár 36:455; and excerpts in Mázandarání 141-42.

See Julio Savi, "The Inebriation of His Enrapturing Call," in Lights of 'Irfán 15 (2014):311-54.

See GPB120, sec.7, para.35.

"Ghazal. ii. In Persian literature," from now on in this section Bausani.

Majmú'ih 30 omits this invocation.

272

Lights of Irfán vol.

16

"Ahriman, the principle of Evil, opposed to Ormuzd, the principle of Good; the devil; a seducer; a demon" (Steingass 124).

Surúsh means "An angel; Gabriel" (Steingass 680).

Referred to "a certain Shaykh 'Abdu'l-Óusayn, a crafty and obstinate priest, whose consuming jealousy of Bahá'u'lláh was surpassed only by his capacity to stir up mischief both among those of high degree and also amongst the lowest of the low, Arab or Persian, who thronged the streets and markets of Kazimayn, Karbilá and Baghdad" (GPB141, sec.8, para.30).

Majmú'ih 30 writes jilvihí.

Majmú'ih 30 writes az.

Majmú'ih 30 omits shud.

See Aristotle, De Anima [On the soul], 3:4, 430-31.

Majmú'ih 30 writes 'ishq-u.

Mítháq means "A promise, agreement, bargain, compact, confederacy, alliance, league" (Steingass 1359).

Shayṭán means "Satan" (Steingass 776).

Majmú'ih 30 writes ?ayrat.

Personal provisional translation by the author with Ms. Faezeh Mardani, added terms in brackets.

Majmú'ih 30 writes gúyam.

Majmú'ih 30 writes ayat.

Majmú'ih 30 omits az-Tú.

The word "lover" translates both al-?abíb and al-áshiq.

Majmú'ih 30 writes Mißr-i-bahar, that is the city of springtime.

In Persian Mißr-i-Iláhí, "Divine Egypt."

In Persian qamíß, literally, shirt.

Majmú'ih 30 writes zi.

Majmú'ih 30 writes gah.

Majmú'ih 30 writes gah.

Majmú'ih 30 writes shu'lihí.

Majmú'ih 30 writes az.

Majmú'ih 30 writes ján-bakhsh, that is soul-refreshing.

See moreover GPB253-54; CF30; PT23, sec.8, para.3; PUP289.

A Tablet by Bahá'u'lláh, revealed in the early 'Akká period and addressed to 'Alí Páshá, the Grand Vizir of Turkey. See SLH159-73.

— A Hymn to Love (Sáqí, bi-dih ábí) (Used by permission of the curator)